1. Introduction

Al Mezan Center for Human Rights (Al Mezan) presents this annual narrative report for the period January-December 2016. The report provides a brief description of the environment in which our work was carried out and provides information on achievements of outcomes and activities as set out in the 2016 Plan of Action. The report covers all activities under the core program and projects during the reporting year; also, a list of the individual projects and a summary of their activities is provided separately to ensure transparency and to better inform the stakeholders and core donors.

The report starts with a brief description of the political and socioeconomic context in which Al Mezan worked based on the main issues the Center dealt with in 2016. It then gives an overall account of the outcomes and participants, challenges, deviations and assessment. A table shows the progress achieved as per the 2016 Plan of Action, which gives Al Mezan and the donor-partners the opportunity to assess the progress with more specificity. A brief section on the projects implemented, in part or in full, during the reporting period is provided, and finally, a list of significant administrative and financial issues are raised for the attention of the stakeholders.

2. Note on context

In 2016, the Israeli occupation entered its 49th year, and the closure/blockade of Gaza entered its 9th year. The long-term result of the Palestinian internal split continues to be exhausted for the benefit of Israel and Jewish settlers in the occupied Palestinian territory (oPt). As the region continued to endure turmoil, the UN Security Council adopted resolution 2334, condemning Israeli settlement activities as lacking any legal validity and criticizing the continued destruction, within occupation, without accountability.1

The end of 2016 saw a noticeable deterioration in living conditions in Gaza. As the now two-million population continued to live through a protracted humanitarian crisis, described below, the end of the year brought further deterioration. The shortening measures of the closure that were announced by Israel after the 2014 bombardment on Gaza were removed in 2016, and movement and access worsened. Another bout of worsened electricity crisis ensued in December, continuing into 2017, and affecting a whole range of human rights.

The power shortages are an example of the complexity of the situation in Gaza, as they are a result of the failure by all duty bearers to comply with their human rights obligations. While restrictions imposed by Israel on power and fuel have undermined the energy sector in Gaza, the internal Palestinian split plays a significant role in this problem. Moreover, peaceful protests by people in Gaza were met with repression and intimidation by the Gaza authorities' security force.2 The new year also began with alarming developments, such as death sentences, honor killing, and Israel's recurring failure to uphold the duty to credibly investigate its serious crimes.

Despite the bleakness of political horizons, which are further influenced by the results of the general elections in the United States, some positive developments at the end of the year should be highlighted. As mentioned above, the UN Security Council resolution 2334, which stressed the obligation of compliance with international law and the inadmissibility of annexing occupied land, represented a significant development. It reflected a long awaited voice by the international community, also reflected in the preparations for a peace conference in Paris. Resolution 2334 serves as the first instance since 1979 of the Security Council adopting a resolution critical of violations of international law in Palestine; this step was not experienced by generations of Palestinians, who felt let down and voiced distrust towards the international community.

For diverse reasons, the debates about intra-Palestinian reconciliation were also revived. Under the pressure of deeper internal splits, especially within the Fatah movement, and the threat of Israel's annexation policy, which is reflected in continued settlement construction and division of Palestinian communities in the oPt, a chance for unity talks bore fruit and ended nine years of bitter division that caused severe harm to the Palestinian political system and to access to human rights. An improvement in the human rights situation is largely dependent on whether these proposals will be implemented on the ground.

In the meantime, Gaza's economic and living conditions are well below 2014 levels. Serious violations of international law and human rights are farther from being accounted for than ever. 2016 also saw a sharp increase in the number and seriousness of attacks that aim to intimidate human rights organizations, especially those working on accountability. Desperation and hopelessness are the common condition, leading to widespread protests and acts of public suicide; also to violent actions by Palestinian individuals against Israeli forces, citizens and settlers. The human rights and humanitarian conditions have never been worse in a territory where human rights violations have been the norm for decades.

The following points are a reflection of the main issues monitored by Al Mezan, and which called for both attention and intervention during the reporting period. They give an idea about the situation in Gaza and some hints to the environment in which the organization struggled to implement its strategy and respond to these challenges.

i. Israeli control and violence: closure/blockade, armed attacks and accountability deficit

The reporting period saw Israel's further retreat from easing measures of the closure/blockade of the Gaza Strip. The closure/blockade policy, which maintains a protracted humanitarian crisis and prevents access to fundamental rights and freedoms of the population, has had far reaching implications on Gaza's development, many of which cannot be corrected in the future, especially for a generation of which more than 70% lived their entire life under conditions of poverty and violence. The closure/blockade violates, inter alia, the population's right to freedom of movement, access to work, water and sanitation, and health. It is accompanied by Israel's frequent incursions and attacks using live-fire that frequently violate the right to life and bodily integrity. This period witnessed a marked decrease in the protection of the right to liberty and security of the person. Given the seriousness of the Israeli closure/blockade, the four Palestinian human rights organizations, Al-Haq, PCHR, Al Dameer and Al Mezan submitted a third communication to the ICC Prosecutor on the issue.

The closure is maintained through daily military operations and through the use of armed force, which hinders the work of farmers and fishermen and puts lives of protestors at risk. In 2016, 55 incursions into Gaza were carried out by Israeli infantry troops and an additional 71 incursions were marked by artillery/tank shelling. Over the course of 80 demonstrations in the buffer zone, 180 Palestinians were shot and injured by Israeli forces and four were killed. In the access restricted areas by sea, 135 fishermen were arrested, 26 were shot and injured, and 43 boats were confiscated by Israeli forces. The Israeli escalation in attacks against farmers and fishermen was noticed all through the reporting period.

The inhibiting influence of the closure and latest Israeli military offensive on Gaza maintain a crippled health sector, prompting patients to continue seeking appropriate medical care outside of Gaza. The complex and onerous permit application process requires an interview with Israeli security services, which puts patients at risk of coercion, torture and ill-treatment, while delaying or denying urgent medical care. Patients remain threatened with arrest throughout the process: during the reporting period, five patients and five patient-companions were arrested at Erez crossing. Al Mezan’s documentation shows that two patients died after the delayed issuance of a permit to access the hospital. Incidents involving coercion of patients to provide information about their families or neighbors have increased and attest that such security interviews represent a tool for extortion and leverage, whereby the pressing need for life-saving medical care is levied in Israel’s information-gathering practices.

During the reporting period the Israeli forces arrested one Palestinian athlete from Gaza, 14 businessmen at Erez crossing, and 26 Palestinians (12 of whom are children) in Gaza’s buffer zone, in addition to the numerous arrests of Palestinians in the West Bank, including an elderly man and woman who were in Jerusalem for prayers.

The chronic electricity deficit affecting Gaza over the past ten years, prompted mainly by Israeli policies and controls, continues to disrupt delivery of basic services and undermines already vulnerable livelihoods and living conditions. The blackouts, which worsened in the winter, prompt families to use crude means of light, including candles, which this period resulted in the death of three children. They sparkèd a wave of protests in the Gaza Strip leading to talks for temporary solutions with aid from Turkey and Qatar; however, a permanent solution to improve power supplies seems impossible without the removal of Israeli restrictions.

On several occasions, the Israeli forces launched airstrikes and artillery attacks, some of which hit homes and killed civilians. In March, an airstrike killed two children, a brother and a sister, when the debris and shrapnel from the explosion fell on their house. In the first week of May, a series of artillery attacks and air raids killed a woman and injured about a dozen civilians. These attacks are said to be responses to attacks emanating from Gaza, but in targeting protected persons in occupied territory, they follow a clear pattern of illegal belligerent reprisals.

The continued impunity of Israel and denial of justice for Palestinians means that the infringement of basic and inalienable human rights of Palestinians and the de-development of Gaza has been allowed to continue unabated within this reporting period. Over the summer, the Israeli Military Advocate General Office (MAG) announced the closure of numerous complaints submitted by Al Mezan and partner NGOs without launching criminal investigations.

investigations, thereby continuing to fail to credibly investigate attacks where there is evidence that the Israeli army committed war crimes.\textsuperscript{11}

As these trends of disregard that Israel shows to human rights and international humanitarian law continue across the oPt, accountability for violations emerges as one of the most crucial concerns. Without perpetrators of such grave violations being held to account, the violations are expected to continue and worsen. Practices such as, \textit{inter alia}, the targeting of civilians, launching of disproportionate armed attacks, extrajudicial killings, forcible displacement, torture and ill-treatment represent the backbone of the Israeli occupation regime that has enabled occupation and separation to continue for almost 50 years. They must be challenged locally and internationally, including by introducing reflective cases within the United Nations mechanisms, the International Criminal Court, and national courts in third States where universal jurisdiction applies. Efforts to raise awareness internationally, so that the UN, European Union and third States that possess political capital and leverage could intervene, are more necessary than ever. A human rights-friendly shift in the international approach to the situation is necessary, especially in light of the proposals and arguments presented in the recent French Initiative and the Quartet Report, both of which are disappointing developments for Palestinian communities and the political initiative.

As impunity continues to prevail at the local level, with the international community unwilling to take measures to secure justice and redress, or to deploy political means to prevent or reduce serious violations, it is increasingly important to strengthen cooperation among human rights actors to secure greater political support for international justice mechanisms in the UN system and the ICC, while continuing professional documentation, building community capacities, and pursuing legal action at the local level.

\textbf{ii. Intimidation campaigns against human rights defenders}

The human rights defenders (HRDs) and civil society organizations working for the promotion and protection of Palestinian human rights, and notably working on accountability for Israeli violations of international law, are under marked pressure seeming to emanate directly from the Israeli government. A protracted campaign of defamation, intimidation and threats escalated during the reporting period as Palestinian HRDs realized they are under tight surveillance by the security services.

Since 2015, when the Israeli security establishment described the global Boycott, Divestment and Sanctions (BDS) movement and Palestinian HRDs who pursue litigation of Israeli violations before international forums, including the ICC, as an existential threat to the security of Israel, HRDs have felt the impact of close surveillance. Communications between staff about normal managerial and financial issues were distorted into problems and widely circulated. Campaigns aiming at defaming HRDs were launched on Facebook. Telephone calls to donors and partner NGOs were made with allegations of financial misconduct and even affiliation with armed terrorist groups. Inquisitive and seemingly harmless calls were made to friends of HRDs by so-called "journalists" who identified themselves to be working for renowned media outlets, which upon follow-up turned out to be counterfeit. Death threats to HRDs and their families were passed via phone calls and emails, with evidence of close personal surveillance.\textsuperscript{12} These serious developments occurred in a context of rising incitement and intimidation against HRDs in Israel, where legislation was adopted to put restrictions on them, and media campaigns launched by right-wing groups putting HRDs in the spotlight.

together with government incitement against them with support from groups such as the NGO Monitor, which continue to act as an arm of the Israeli government to manipulate public opinion and put pressure on donors.

The reporting period also saw pressure directed to humanitarian and development actors in Gaza, where access restrictions for aid workers increased and allegations of international NGOs diverting funding to groups deemed illegal by Israel were made. In 2016, international development organizations have been experiencing increased indirect pressure by Israel to limit their operations and access to Gaza. The access of INGO local and international staff is dependent on permits issued by Israel to the Gaza Strip. With UN OCHA reporting about a 40% increase in permit denial rates in the third quarter of 2016, INGOs, especially local employees, are faced with increasing difficulties in conducting their day-to-day work.

In July 2016, Israeli security arrested the director of World Vision\(^\text{14}\) Gaza branch crossing while he was returning to Gaza from a work trip to Jerusalem. The Israeli authorities claimed that he had allegedly channeled \(\text{US}\) of aid money to Hamas over the past 10 years. According to information available to Al Mezan, he was tortured during the interrogation. World Vision suggested that its total budget for operations in Gaza amounted to roughly one third of what Israel claimed had been embezzled.

Similarly, a UN contractor was arrested at Erez and accused of \(\text{CHF}\) of Hamas, and keeping Hamas out of trouble with the UN\(^\text{15}\) which was condemned by the UN after an emphatic statement that tracking the said resources proved they were mobilized to the correct destination. Israel has further claimed to have more ongoing investigations against local INGO employees.

iii. Internal split

As mentioned above, the intra-Palestinian political divide has persisted over the past nine years and fed into dangerous dynamics. Israeli policies of closure/blockade and military action continue to strangle Gaza's population. The international community's engagement focuses on humanitarian aid, rather than development of rights\(^\text{16}\) an approach that allows Israel\(^\text{16}\) fatal policies to continue unchecked. Frequent fracases between the authorities in Gaza and Ramallah, despite the current government of national consensus, continue to hurt the availability of basic services, and lead to civil rights violations through repressing dissent.

While the rates of poverty and unemployment soar, the suspension of salaries for civil servants appointed by the Gaza government has added around a quarter of a million people to the poverty pool in Gaza. The young generations and other vulnerable groups are disproportionally affected by poverty and access to adequate services, especially education and healthcare services. Crime rates have been on the rise at rates unprecedented in Gaza. Electricity cuts have become normalized to the extent that when the power is cut for 50% of the time it is considered a normal state of affairs. Yet, these cuts are impacting vulnerable groups, leading to deaths and reducing access to water and sanitation.

One of the symptoms of the gaping Palestinian political divide has been political and arbitrary detention and repression of free expression and dissent. The reporting period was no exception, despite a relative decrease in political detention in Gaza. In addition to the incidents in footnote 7 above, the reporting period saw serious incidents involving police violence, death in police custody, and a raid on the Bar Association in Gaza. In January 2017, peaceful protests against power cuts—a result of a crisis building since December 2016—were addressed by force by the security forces in Gaza, which are still operated by the Hamas movement. A civil society conference that aimed to debate the political split was banned by the security forces in Gaza.

Moreover, incidences of explosions, use of small arms and rises of crime rates, point to an increasing state of insecurity. The reporting period saw several incidents of unexplained explosions in North and Middle Gaza, shooting at a civilian car in Beit Hanoun, and several incidents of the use of small arms in private spaces and in feuds.

The use of the death penalty stood as a prominent issue in Gaza during the reporting period. Ezzadin Al Qassam Brigades extra-judicially executed one of their members in February. Courts sentenced nine persons to death and confirmed the death sentence for another two. The Hamas Movement Parliamentary Bloc at the PLC announced that more death sentences would be carried out, with hints at possible public executions, to deter rising rates of crime. This is despite the clear unlawfulness of all executions in Palestine, which are explicitly conditioned by the approval of the President of the Palestinian Authority. Later, in May, the authorities executed four persons. These developments have prompted stronger responses from Palestinian civil society, and Al Mezan intends to double our work on the death penalty in Palestine with a view towards abolishing it completely in the coming years.

iv. Increasing democratic deficit

Since 2006, a new generation has been raised in Gaza without the experience of elections, but with a deep sense of political divide and violence. The July 2016 announcement that local elections would take place all over the oPt was lauded by Palestinian civil society as a step that could provide opportunities to reverse the democratic deficit in Gaza and engage large segments of society in the management of their lives especially if followed by elections at universities, trade unions and other social and political groupings. Regrettably, the processes leading to the elections were colored by distrust and actions that undermined the elections. Finally, a case filed with the Palestinian High Court resulted in a ruling that struck down the elections on the ground that there is an internal split that involves the security forces and the courts system. Ironically, a measure that was meant to be a step towards ending the split was ended by the split itself.

The democratic deficit cannot only be dealt with through elections alone. Civil society must be relieved of the pressure that is being exerted on it, and Palestinian authorities must seek to relax some of the new policies and legislations. The way teachers' strikes were dealt with in the West Bank was worrying, with security services interfering and making arrests among activists. The Ministry of Labor’s decisions that practically prevented trade unions from accessing their bank accounts without approval from the Ministry was a harsh way to deal with practical differences of opinion.

A new decree by the Council of Ministers of the government of national consensus prevents NGOs registered as not-for-profits to access any grants without prior approval by the Cabinet, thus disproportionately increasing government control, despite the high, and commended levels of transparency and accountability already legally required. This decree, which was criticized by civil society in Palestine, was subject to negotiations that aimed at reducing the government unreasonable control; however, Al Mezan was unable to access grant funds during the negotiations, which ended in May 2016. In a yet more concerning development, the Council of Ministers stated in its 27 January 2016 that it would seek to unify the funding channels, be they for government or civil society organizations, and work towards channeling all funding through the Ministry of Finance. A temporary closure of the office of an international NGO in Gaza was also of concern.

Palestinian civil society has voiced concern over continued legislative reforms, which were passed through presidential decrees in the West Bank and meetings of Hamas PLC bloc in Gaza, and which continue to undermine democracy and the rule of law in Palestine. In 2016, a presidential decree was issued concerning the formation of the Constitutional Court, which in turn interpreted articles in the Basic Law (Palestine's temporary constitution) to allow for the removal of immunity from elected PLC members in a process that was stained by political interference.

v. Despair and insecurity

Within these conditions, and under the pressure exerted on Palestinian civilians by the occupation regime and Palestinian authorities, expressions of despair and helplessness have been noted throughout Gaza and the oPt. Examples include the spread of lone wolf attacks by Palestinian young men and women. Young individuals find themselves in a complex situation, living under occupation, violence and repression, and witnessing the expansion of settlements, with all that it brings: restrictions on movement, violent dispersal of demonstrations and protest, settler violence and displacement and demolition. They are losing trust in all political processes—local, regional and international. The Israeli response, which includes very serious violations that have led to numerous extrajudicial executions and unnecessary killings, is empowering these feelings.

In Gaza, there has been a sudden increase in public suicides, where desperate citizens who face impossible, humiliating conditions that they feel they can no longer manage, decide to take their own lives. There have been several such suicides, including at a hospital where people lit themselves on fire, and where people threw themselves off tall buildings, to end their lives.

The alienation of the young generation and desperation of parents whose dignity has been injured far too many times due to aid dependency and humiliating and degrading treatment is a matter of serious concern. There are rising individual grievances that must be dealt with through political solutions and a path of inclusion in political processes. This can only be achieved by the full lifting of Israel’s closure/blockade of Gaza, securing accountability and access to justice, Palestinian internal reconciliation, and a shift in the international involvement in the conflict in a way that secures respect for international law and the rights and freedoms of the population.

3. Overall achievement (outcomes, results)

Al Mezan’s main areas of action in 2016 remained largely the same as provided in the Strategic Plan 2015-2017. A flexible set of priorities includes a focus on monitoring and seeking accountability and access to justice both in Israel and in Gaza, challenging the closure/blockade of Gaza, and strengthening the work on Palestinian unity and on economic, social and cultural rights. The following areas of work provide a brief overview of Al Mezan’s main action points, which are further detailed in the PoA below.

Monitoring and Documentation

- Al Mezan field workers documented 203 attacks by the Israeli occupation forces (IOF) in Gaza resulting in death of nine civilians, including three children and one woman, and injury to 221 civilians, including 36 children. In addition, Israeli authorities arrested 202 Palestinians, including 135 fishermen and 30 individuals travelling via Erez crossing either for business or seeking medical treatment outside Gaza. Further, our field workers reported a noticeable escalation of attacks against fishermen in the naval part of access restricted area; 141 incidents of shooting at fishermen were documented. The documentation enabled reporting and legal interventions into many of these cases, and sharing information with UN bodies and INGOs.
- At the local level, hundreds of violations committed by the Palestinian authorities and other Palestinian non-state actors were also documented, leading to strong interventions by Al Mezan on behalf of victims of inter alia unlawful detention, abuse and ill-treatment, repression of free expression, police violence, death penalty, and use of small arms. Al Mezan also intervened on behalf of victims who were arbitrarily denied access to basic services based on documentation of their cases.
- Comprehensive questionnaires on IOF violations, local violations, situations of risk, and the closure/blockade were inserted into Al Mezan’s database. The data has been analyzed and utilized for reporting and information provision to local and international organizations, including OCHA, OHCHR, and WHO (this year, over 560 requests for data/statistics were answered).
- Al Mezan’s monitoring and documentation is perceived to be relevant to people’s needs in Gaza. People appreciate the significance of documentation of violations, including violations by local authorities, and have personally contacted Al Mezan to voice appreciation for raising their issues through statements and by directly intervening with the relevant authorities to stop violations or risks.
- The field research around the new taxation policies by the local authorities highlighted mounting burdens on Gaza’s population, the majority of whom already live below the poverty line.

Legal Assistance and Advice:

- In total, 1,859 individuals benefited from the legal aid unit, with 754 of them having received free legal advice on a range of violations or situations of risk; 195 complaints were submitted to the Israel authorities on behalf of victims. Al Mezan provided legal representation for 74 people before Israeli courts, including 3 minors; 45 of the 74 were detainees. Al Mezan continues to engage with the Israeli justice system, civilian and military, with lawyers following up on 107 complaints filed in 2014 and 2015 and a strategic civil litigation case. Al Mezan also engaged the new mechanism in the Israeli ministry of justice which was created to investigate allegations of torture, and submitted 14 cases to it. While no investigations were launched by this body, the complaints represent solid test-cases for its credibility.
Another 189 complaints were made to the Palestinian authorities, including 23 children—one case concerning a child before Palestinian courts. Al Mezan also engaged the Palestinian justice system with a strategic case involving equality before the law.

Some of the successful legal interventions include Al Mezan's close work with Gisha to secure access for 96 people whose travel permit requests had been repeatedly rejected by Israeli or local authorities. Access was also secured for a witness in a major civil suit in Israel following petitions with courts in Israel.

In Gaza, interventions led to the release of dozens of people unlawfully detained, swift intervention in juvenile cases, securing access to housing and healthcare for dozens of families and releasing pressure on journalists and activists.

At the international level, Al Mezan was part of two joint submissions to the ICC, one of which was led by Al Mezan and has remained confidential. The second communication focused on Gaza closure/blockade and is public. The A complaint was also filed in France regarding arms used in alleged grave breaches of IHL. Al Mezan also provided major support (documentation and investigations) for a civil case in the Netherlands.

Advocacy, media and liaison:

Active membership was maintained in eight networks and coalitions: notably, FIDH, PHROC, EuroMed Rights, OMCT and the Protection Cluster. Coordination with FIDH increased during its Congress in South Africa leading to FIDH intervention concerning attacks on Al Mezan's human rights defenders—a protection initiative also pursued by OMCT in support of Al Mezan. PHROC was effective in addressing significant issues at the local level: free expression, independence of the judiciary, and workers' rights (e.g. teacher strikes). Work with EuroMed Rights strengthened the engagement with the EU institutions and collaboration with regional and European partners.

During the reporting period, Al Mezan issued 83 statements and was part to 45 joint statements and 5 joint appeals. There also was contribution to 7 statements by EuroMed Rights. Al Mezan participated in 13 international advocacy missions, meeting with high-level governmental, EU and UN officials, and with civil society, in Belgium, Switzerland, Germany, Sweden, France, and the United States.

Al Mezan's work was mentioned in the media 892 times in the Arabic language media. Multimedia materials and social media posts received tens of thousands of visits. The website had over 47,000 visits (Arabic version: 36,000 visits, English: 11,000 visits) during the reporting period. The Center's Facebook and Twitter accounts have over 6,000 followers. A documentary was screened for about 200 people in Gaza, received over 2,400 views on YouTube, and was screened on a local TV station.

Al Mezan fieldworkers and lawyers appeared/participated in over 170 interviews with local and international media outlets covering various range of topics concerning human rights and IHL violations.

Advocacy efforts continued to focus on the situation in Gaza, accountability and human rights defenders, with engagement with the Human Rights Council, UN bodies and Special Rapporteurs, UN CAT, the European Union and Member States, the Council of Europe, and the ICC. The issues highlighted by Al Mezan and the partners were mentioned in HRC resolutions, EU FAC conclusions and statements and interventions by EU Member States. CAT concluding observations took up over a dozen issues raised by Al Mezan and our partners. Briefings to diplomatic and UN missions in Gaza also fed into diplomatic processes and consultations.

Training/awareness-raising:
- Diverse awareness and training activities benefited various groups in Gaza. The 15 trainings, 27 workshops, 1 screening, 70 lectures, 120 student-led discussion sessions, and one HR Artwork competition for students in the reporting period reached 4,617 people (1,084 women and 2,233 children, 26 of whom were juvenile detainees). Staff members delivered 81% of the total training/awareness hours (736 out of 905 hours).
- 33 university students were recruited as volunteers and trained to deliver HR awareness to their peers. They organized 120 awareness sessions for 333 of their peers in local universities.
- International experts conducted a 7-day extensive training course for HR activists, ER doctors, and lawyers on documenting torture/ill-treatment using the Istanbul Protocol. The experts also discussed access to reparation through UN mechanisms and treaty bodies.
- The Annual Human Rights Award for Student had around 4,000 students participating with their artwork. The 36 winners (top three from each age group) were honored in a ceremony attended by 430 people, including their parents, teachers, and representative from the Ministry of Education and UNRWA.
- Staff training is expected to boost the work on human rights mechanisms and the producing of multimedia materials in the future.

Information/Communication
- Al Mezan’s field workers received a training on videography and video editing principles, as well as basics of photography, photocomposition and light, all to be used to digitalize monitoring and documentation, and make it available for use in the future.
- 10 videos of witness accounts (fishermen and farmers) were recorded and are available for publication/use in other videos and films for the purpose of awareness-raising, advocacy and information-sharing.
- In the wake of the increased threat to HRDs, and together with Al Mezan’s IT department, a digital safety strategy was put forward in order to increase personal and digital safety of Al Mezan’s colleagues.
- Al Mezan facilitated visits of international NGOs and consultants to Gaza who sought information and follow-up on victims of IHL violations from OPE, particularly ambulance drivers and medical staff, as well as farmers and fishermen in ARA.
- Throughout 2016, Al Mezan conducted tens of informative meetings with diplomatic missions, international organizations and other actors relaying information about our work, monitoring efforts, advocacy and work on accountability for the purpose of promoting Al Mezan’s work, gather support and explore new possibilities for funding.
Terms of references were put forward to develop new advocacy, fundraising and human resources strategies.

Library Services:
1,052 students, researchers, and lawyers benefited from library services. In total, 2,336 books were borrowed with a wide range of subjects, mainly law and IHL. 69 new books and 70 new periodicals were added to the library.

Threat from outbreak of violence. Although the Strip has seen a relatively "quiet" period since the Operation Protective Edge in 2014, the situation is always fragile and volatile. Based on previous experience, attacks from either side can potentially occur any day, and the situation can quickly develop from a single incident into a full-fledged war.

In situations of armed conflict, Al Mezan immediately changes the organization’s mode of operation: only necessary staff (field workers and management) continue daily operations that are changed to monitoring and advocacy. All other activities are frozen until hostilities cease and can be resumed, at times also after an extended period.
5. Assessment and Evaluation

Al Mezan has various tools for assessment and evaluation in place. Staff observation, which is reflected in routine reporting, is a source of assessment whereby the achievement of results is measured and changes to the activities are determined.

Field workers trace important cases as they are used for reporting or referred to legal intervention. Lawyers follow cases and deal with procedures and obstacles to push for them to progress. The training unit employs a variety of tools, including participant satisfaction forms, oral evaluations during activities, and pre/post tests to measure new learning. Advocacy activities are measured against whether target officials and institutions are reached, and whether asks and messages are received positively or find their way in resolutions or statements, and ultimately bring about policy changes.

These tools were used to assess achievements for the purposes of this report. After the end of the reporting year, an evaluation is conducted with focus groups encompassing a random sample of the beneficiaries to illicit specific information about the results and impact, as reported below. An external evaluation is conducted at the end of every 3-year strategic plan.

In January 2017, Al Mezan's units sampled 35 beneficiaries (16 women, 19 men) for the annual internal evaluation. The beneficiaries were invited to focus group meeting at Al Mezan main office to provide feedback in relation to various activities implemented in 2016:

- 85% participants who benefited from workshops/training expressed their satisfaction answering questions related to the time, place, material, and style of delivery of workshops/training.
- Benefits of new learning ranged between 63% and 75%, according to pre/post-tests' results.
- Activists from local NGOs and journalists expressed appreciation for networking and collaboration with Al Mezan.
- Representative of Palestinian Fishermen Union expressed his appreciation of the prompt legal aid provided to detained fishermen.
- One patient seeking treatment outside Gaza who had been refused a travel permit three times informed Al Mezan that the legal intervention helped secure access to hospitals four times to seek treatment and medical follow-up.
- Participants who attended Al Mezan's specialized course with international experts on documenting torture using Istanbul protocol said that the knowledge they acquired has highly influenced the way they approach cases of torture.
- When asked for suggestion to improve Al Mezan work, participants urged Al Mezan to hold other specialized trainings on torture documentation, conduct more workshops with the police force, and focus on vital, immediate issues such as the electricity crisis and lack of freedom of movement.

In late December, the Legal Aid unit sampled 23 people who received legal consultation (including 6 who benefited from legal representation). The sample responded to a questionnaire designed by UNDP concerning activities implemented under UNDP/PAPP Rule of Law program:

- 78% of legal consultation beneficiaries were satisfied with legal information provided by Al Mezan lawyers and were pleased with the professionalism of the staff and the time the lawyers took to hear their cases.
- 95% said that they would come to Al Mezan for any future legal consultation.
- Six recipients of legal aid who, in addition to legal consultation, also benefited from legal representation were all satisfied with our lawyers' work and follow-up on their cases, as well as the level of communication to keep them up to date with the latest developments of their legal case. They expressed appreciation for the level of involvement they were granted, especially the freedom to make final decisions pertaining to their case.

- A number of legal aid recipients noted an increase in awareness about the judicial system and gained confidence in human rights organizations.

- When asked for suggestions to improve Al Mezan services, most recommended: use of billboards for awareness campaigns; a weekly radio program on human rights; more focus on women with cases before Sharia Courts.
6. Achievement as per Plan of Action 2016

| Conduct field visits to prisons and criminal rehabilitation centers. | 12 field visits annually. | 23 visits to 5 prisons and 18 detention facilities in Gaza by Al Mezan's lawyers. Lawyers spoke with detainees in police custody or prisons, informed them of basic due process rights and took 78 complaints, including 11 complaints from minors. Al Mezan intervention led to releasing 6 minors and transferring 5 others to social welfare institution. | 78 interventions, 72 were successful, to improve legal protection for detainees were successful after complaints were taken by lawyers with prison authorities and followed up until resolved. |
| Conduct Legal representation to victims of arbitrary detention. | 24 victims annually. | 53 cases of arbitrary detention by authorities in Gaza were represented, including 7 boys and 1 woman. Al Mezan’s legal interventions led to the release of 33 individuals, including 6 children, two of whom were detained by the Internal Security Apparatus. | Arbitrary detention challenged via legal intervention. |
| Strategic litigation before Palestinian courts | One case. | One legal intervention in a case concerning a child who has been subjected to torture and subsequently confessed to committing several previously unresolved cases of theft and robbery. Al Mezan took the case after identifying mishandling of the case by investigators. The case was first litigated before the magistrate court, however, after a request for bail in both magistrate and the appeal courts were rejected, the case was finally taken to the juvenile court. The child was released and the fine was reduced to 25%. This case attests to problems within the legal system as far as juvenile justice is concerned. | Violations of human rights by the local authorities challenged at strategic level. |

8. Admin and Financial issues

A detailed financial statement is attached to this report. It contains multiple books, showing revenues, expenses for all donors. Other books deal with projects, and are added for the sake of transparency and information-sharing with all partners.

Financial situation:

Despite the difficulties faced during the reporting year, Al Mezan's budget remained stabilized through measures that reduced spending and increased revenues. Regrettably, some of these measures were delayed due to unexpected circumstances, including concerning health issues and prompt travel of managerial staff members for rest and respite.

One of the core donors, Save the Children, informed Al Mezan that there are no available funds to support the core program in 2016. There have been discussions about project funding. Despite the efforts to recruit joint project support, the attempt was not successful during the reporting year.

The Norwegian Representative Office to the PA also informed of the decision to join the HR/IHL Secretariat starting in 2017. This issue was raised between the Office and Al Mezan in meetings. Later, the Office informed Al Mezan that the decision to join the secretariat was retracted, and that future cooperation would be discussed in early 2017.

The reporting period witnessed tensions between some of the Palestinian human rights NGOs that are registered as not-for-profit companies under existing Palestinian law and the Palestinian Council of Ministers. This followed a decision by the Council that dictates that these NGOs require the approval of the Council for every grant before they can access it. This problem was subject to repeated discussions with the government for months during which Al Mezan was unable to access grants, which affected the ability to implement some of the activities during the first four months of the year. However, an agreement was reached in May that allowed access to the funds, and minimized the government control.

The deficit, reported to donors in 2013, has been almost completely eliminated during 2016, with about 5% remaining. Al Mezan's management will consult with donors concerning any remaining funds that can be used to fund this remaining amount, and with the Board of Director to approve directing any unrestricted funds for this purpose, if relevant.

The 2016 total budget is USD 924,344 (both for the core program and projects). However, given the gaps in the structure that were not bridged due to failed recruiting attempts in 2016, the actual spending was less than planned. Al Mezan consequently prepared a modified budget for the reporting year and shared it with all donors in December in order to obtain approval.

The total revenues received as of 31 December 2016 reached USD 855,182. Moreover, an amount of USD 186,706 of remaining funds from 2015 was cleared to be used in 2016 following approvals of corresponding donors.

In conclusion, Al Mezan's budget was relatively stable in 2016. There is a degree of uncertainty for 2017, but Al Mezan is seeking to recruit funding for the core program and projects, which have proven to be a suitable means to bridge gaps and support significant elements in the core program. There have been discussions with some project donors; such as UNDP/PAPP, OSF and Diakonia.
Structure:

There have been significant changes to the Centre's structure. Two senior staff members have left Al Mezan (on a positive note: one became the president of a university and the second a dean of the politics faculty at the same university). A third staff member has relocated and is working from a distance due to security-related circumstances. Some of the newly established posts are also still vacant, despite the advertisement and interviewing of dozens of candidates. Al Mezan has recruited several temporary replacements to deal with these gaps, and has asked existing staff members to cover other gaps. With no success in recruiting senior and technical positions, this issue was considered in the second half of 2016 and creative solutions to stabilize the structure were formulated. Senior staff members who have spent years with Al Mezan and have developed strong research and training skills have been relocated to positions at the Training and Mass Communication Unit and the Research and Technical Assistance Unit for a proportional period of six months. An assessment of their work will be conducted in February 2017; a process on which a decision will be taken on their permanent recruitment for these positions. As these positions were filled by staff from the Field Work Unit, new field workers were recruited and trained to fill the gap.

Moreover, Al Mezan has contemplated the idea of creating a small office (one staff member and one intern) in Europe. This proposition was introduced in order to deal with some of the outstanding safety and access problems faced in 2015 and 2016, especially pressures and threats that seem to emanate from the Israeli security against HRDs engaged in work on accountability. A small office could secure presence in Europe to enable international advocacy and litigation, and reduce security threats to staff and information. Nevertheless, the budget cannot support this costly endeavor. Therefore, it has been decided that this will be in the form of a pilot project that will depend on whether or not there is new funds for it, and will be subject to review at the end of the pilot year. Medico International – Germany has approved additional funding to initiate this project, and it will be appraised in February 2017 for final decisions on the matter.

Deviations:

Due to the reasons described in the previous section, Al Mezan did not have enough staff to conduct the planned technical assistance to local authorities and civil society organizations part of the action plan (section 2.2.3).

Due to tight restriction on travel permits for Palestinian seeking to travel through Erez crossing, our Training and Mass Communication coordinator could not participate in two trainings (one by UN Women, and another by Friedrich-Ebert-Stiftung) held in Jordan.

Training on documenting torture, which was originally planned to be held abroad and had been postponed several times due to travel restrictions, was finally held this year in Gaza after Al Mezan received the EU delegation's approval, and recruited international experts who managed to travel to Gaza and conduct a 7-day intensive training course on the documentation of torture using the Istanbul protocol and engaging with UN human rights mechanisms.

The number of participants at Al Mezan's 6-month lawyer training exceeded original estimates by 50% (38 lawyers participated instead of 25). A similar increase was also recorded in the Pass-the-Word program which is aimed at university students. Such numbers indicate that students and lawyers are well aware of Al Mezan training programs.

The reporting period has been marked by a significant rise in the number of civilians seeking legal advice concerning freedom of movement, due to a surge in rejection of travel permits by Israel. In total, Al Mezan provided legal advice for and filed complaints on behalf of 140 cases, the majority of which concerned access to health care in the West Bank and Israel (101 cases of access to health care in 2016 were filed compared to the original target of 36 complaints, which was set based on the number of complaints received in 2015).

Al Mezan’s legal unit also exceeded initial target of legal intervention with local authorities; in total, 189 cases were taken with local authorities in Gaza (compared to 105 cases in 2015). The large increase in this year’s beneficiaries came mostly from cases concerning movement and access restriction (about 50% of all cases).

Due to the large amount of complaints collected by our lawyers in various visits to prisons and detention centers, Al Mezan decided to conduct more visits than initially planned (12) to provide much needed legal aid to prisoners/detainees. In total, our lawyers conducted 23 visits and took 78 complaints, including 11 complaints from minors. Al Mezan successfully intervened and resolved 72 complaints, which also led to the release of 6 minors and transfer of 5 others to social welfare institution.

Instead of creating online photo gallery to commemorate the second anniversary of 2014 Aggression on Gaza, Al Mezan opted for creating an info-graph both in Arabic and English to increased social media exposure. The Info-graph was published and shared on social media, mainly Twitter and Facebook, on the day of the anniversary.

Capacity building:

Al Mezan has an ambitious capacity building set of activities in 2016 and 2017. They touch on staff development and training on the one hand, and on building the organizational capacity through devising strategies for fund-raising, advocacy and human resources development on the other. These are significant areas for the stability and effectiveness of the organization in the coming years. For the first time in years, it is possible to invest more in program management, advocacy and legal assistance. Despite the challenges mentioned above, Al Mezan worked hard in 2016 to fill the gaps in the structure and ensure that the capacity-building plans will be implemented. The capacity building items were processed quite late in the year and they are expected to be completed in the first half of 2017.
